Employee shareholder shares – the new tax-efficient way to incentivise your key people

Following the election, it seems that the employee shareholder regime will be available for some time to come. That is good news if you wish to incentivise your management teams and other key employees in a highly tax-efficient way in any of the following situations:

- incentivising the senior management team (and/or more junior managers) as part of a private equity-backed management buy-out or management buy-in
- providing an equity incentive for key people in an early-stage or mid-stage SME (where cash may be short and the shares are yet to acquire significant value)
- incentivising management in private companies with a more mature business profile (when the regime may be used in conjunction with growth shares to promote future growth in the capital value of the company, whilst ring-fencing the value that has already been created).

At this breakfast seminar, speakers from Nabarro LLP and MM&K remuneration consultants will discuss the hugely attractive opportunity afforded in such situations by the employee shareholder regime (including analysis of the major commercial, legal and tax issues involved in establishing such an arrangement).
